

Blacklist: Air valid fires companies' websites

“According to the information site, the companies’ websites are not required to specify their inscriptions on the blacklist.

In a few weeks, a European blacklist will be disseminated and updated. Before the release of the blacklist the independent news website, Air Valid, recalled that the websites of airline companies have no obligation to inform the net surfers of their inclusion on the blacklist.”

This information is relayed by www.expats-blog.com among its 10,000 members expatriates, which include 5, 000 bloggers. A reference on everything you need to know before moving abroad.
